ON
RECLAIMING SCIENCE PREVENTING AND REVERSING GENOMICIDE

Reclaiming Science: Preventing and Reversing Genomicide

December 19-23, 2016 Mysore, Karnataka, India and At Distance Through Electronic Communication

The 40th Indian Social Science Congress International Symposium on Reclaiming Science: Preventing and Reversing Genomicide is now accepting submissions.

The Symposium Convener, Rima E. Laibow, MD, and the Symposium Steering Committee seek papers from scientists, innovators, educators, investors, health advocates, health professionals, academics, activists and others who understand that current health practices (in the broadest sense) along with social and public health policies that implement them, are destroying both the health and the genomic future of the global population.

Understanding that the genomic damage asserts itself in infertility, increasing incidence of chronic, degenerative disease like autism, Alzheimer's, diabetes and cancer and a subsequent loss of both quality of life and life itself, we seek solutions to these problems which are

- Innovative
- Implementable
- Widely Deployable

Submissions should relate to one or more of the following Symposium Themes:

1. Low Tech/High Impact Real World Health Strategies
2. Safe, Deployable Technologies Enhancing Health Autonomy including Nutritional, Traditional, Agricultural and Dietary Supplementation Strategies
3. Replacing Health-Hurtful Practices with Health-Enhancing Ones
4. Diagnosing and Reversing Genomic Damage
5. Identifying, Impacting and Reversing Dangerous Public Health Policy

While illness serves the interests of many sectors of society it does not serve either the people, those who ARE society, or the greater goal of up-lift-ment and self-determination for all people.

To that end we seek to create a lasting impact on health, health policy and, most of all, global awareness so that these innovations and implementations can bear positive and powerful fruit for the planet, its people and its environment. The use of the electronic participation and presentation format has been chosen specifically to enhance that end. Knowing that place and presence have always provided barriers to shared knowledge and its rapid implementation, the International Symposium will combine both in-person and electronic presentation and participation.

Presentations will be selected on the basis of timeliness, meaningful potential solutions to clearly identified and defined problems, deployability, quality of documentation and creativity. All submissions will be considered for publication in electronic format through the online International Journal of Natural Health, Science and Policy.
