Harley-Davidson to assemble motorcycles in India

New Delhi, (UNI)- Harley-Davidson India today announced that it will assemble select models of motorcycles in the country at its CKD (complete knock-down) assembly facility which is set to be operational in the first half of 2011 in the state of Haryana.

The company would commence assembling of the motorcycles from component kits supplied by its parent company's plants located in Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Missouri and by the its suppliers in the US, it said in a statement.

However, other models will continue to be imported as completely built motorcycles for now, it added.

"We are building a strong foundation for our business in India, first by establishing a world-class dealer network, and now by commencing CKD assembly operations," said Harley-Davidson India Managing Director Anoop Prakash.

Till now, Harley-Davidson India has been importing completely assembled motorcycles from the company's US final assembly plants.

"This investment will allow Harley-Davidson to improve our market responsiveness and production flexibility while reducing the tariff burden, which we expect will drive growth over time by making our bikes more accessible to India's consumers," said Harley-Davidson Motor Company President and Chief Operating Officer Matthew S Levatich.

India will be the second country in which Harley-Davidson will have CKD assembly operations outside the US, after Brazil where the company began assembly operations in 1999.

Harley-Davidson India commenced operations in August 2009 and opened its first dealership in July 2010.

The company currently offers 12 models in its 2010 line-up in India, available through authorised dealerships in New Delhi, Mumbai, Chandigarh and Hyderabad.

Siamese twins separated in rare surgery

Thanjavur, (UNI)- In a rare surgery, a team of doctors at Rajah Mirasdar Government Hospital, attached to Thanjavur Medical College here, successfully separated four-year-old parasitic conjoined male twins or Siamese twins as they are usually called, yesterday.

larger twin was kicking and alive. He was normal, he said.

Dr Sathappan, who led the surgery process, said there were several types of conjoined twins and this case was one of parasitic twins. These were twins that were conjoined resulting in one of them being smaller and less formed and thus dependent on the larger for survival. The conjoined twins were delivered by a caesarean section at a private hospital at Kumbakonam, he added.

"This is one of the rarest of rare anomalies that occur once in ten lakh births," Dr Sathappan said.

Paediatrics Surgery Department functioning at Rajah Mirasdar Government Hospital is fully equipped to handle such complicated surgeries.
